MY DEVELOPMENTAL EXPERIENCES OF PERSONAL GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT

Development and personal growth proceeds systematically and experientially. We grow physically as we are nourished and exposed to exercise, for example. So we undergo growth cognitively, spiritually, socially, and interpersonally. Each area has several specific influences that help us maximize or stunt the learning and growing process from early life to our later years in life.

The list below is your opportunity to assess the influences on your life and how they have contributed to the person you have become (or are becoming). At each stage in development, we can direct some of the influences on us, but not all of them. Some experiences we must accept and adapt to, while others we can shape, minimize or encourage more of them.

AREAS OF INFLUENCE

Biblical/spiritual teachings:

Cultural patterns:

Activities, sports, toys:

TV/Video program and personalities:

MY LIFE'S JOURNEY OF GROWTH EXPERIENCES

While physical growth proceeds by age in a fairly predictable manner, psychological growth proceeds by experiences. Positive and negative experiences are the basis of our growth emotionally. Such experiences are very personal and subjective. No two people are the same. One particular experience may affect two people very differently. One person may have been affected profoundly, while another to a much lesser degree.

Review the questions below and respond to them as your experiences dictate. Learn from your answers as you reflect on your history of growth experiences.

1. Name one event by which you grew and gained maturity:

2. Name one event that had a stagnation influence on you. It made you unmotivated and discouraged:

3. Name one event that caused you to become happy, encouraged and hopeful:
